THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

Events of Interest From Washington.

By J. E. Jones.

THE ATTACK ON MOUNT VERNON.

Another effort is being made by some of the idle agitators who breed in prolific numbers at the national capital, to stir up sentiment against the management of Mount Vernon-on-the-Potomac, the home of General Washington and his family. As usual, the critics pick out particular incidents to make it appear that the "clutch of greed" is apparent in the administration of Mount Vernon. However, the facts are that about the time of the civil war the government of the United States and the Commonwealth of Virginia had permitted the mansion at Mount Vernon to become a dilapidated old structure, and the entire estate was in a condition of shameful neglect. Mount Vernon was actually saved to the people of this country by the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, founded by Miss Ann Pamela Cunningham, known as the "Southern Matron." The Mount Vernon Ladies Association has among its members some of the most prominent women of the country among whom are the present Regent, Miss Harriet Clayton Comgely, a member of one of the best Delaware families; Mrs. Phoebe Hearst, mother of the great publisher; Miss Alice Longfellow, daughter of the immortal poet; Mrs. Mary T. Leiter, wife of the great Chicago financier; Mrs. J. Dundas Lippincott, whose family is known to the publishing world throughout the country; Mrs. Jane A. Riggs, the name of whose family in banking is known wherever banks and bankers exist; Mrs. Horace Mann Townner, wife of Congressman Townner of Iowa, and a great many other equally well known women.

The advisory committee for 1914 also indicates the high character of people called by the Ladies Association to their councils. The committee is as follows: Chief Justice White, Washington, D. C.; Mr. Henry Cass Lodge, New York, N. Y.; Honorable George Gray, Wilmington, Delaware; Colonel William Anderson, Lexington, Virginia; Honorable Edwin Warfield, Baltimore, Maryland.

The Mount Vernon Ladies Association has caused an admission fee of twenty-five cents to be charged all visitors, and the funds have been used to restore Mount Vernon to its original grandeur. First-class men have been employed, and they have given their intelligent industry and lives to the work of perpetuating and preserving the place. They have been very properly paid good salaries, but perhaps less than the same class of service would have cost the government itself, had it done its duty in acquiring Mount Vernon. There is no historic relic in the world better preserved, and the management of which ought to be free from criticism than Mount Vernon. The institutions under the control of the government do not, as a rule, show good care, and the splendid results which every observer beholds at Mount Vernon are clear proofs that attacks upon the Mount Vernon Ladies Association are outrageous. The agitators are asking for a congressional investigation. Perhaps such an investigation would be a good thing, as it might clear the atmosphere of the untruths that have been circulated against the women, who have performed so noble and patriotic a duty in behalf of their country. Congressmen or individuals who look into the affairs at Mount Vernon are always convinced that the best possible results have been obtained.

GOVERNMENT ENVELOPES.
A total of 2,500,000,000 stamped envelopes are used annually in the conduct of the official business of the government. There are three hundred and fifteen different styles, size and grades of wrappers used at the Capitol and in the Departments. None of these envelopes are of any use to the general public as they are of the class that are stamped "Prohibitively for private use to avoid payment of postage, $300."

THE STRUGGLE OF NEUTRALITY.
The most perplexing problems are brought before the nation day by day as a result of the European war, and if the men in charge of the government were as ready to resent insults, real and imaginary, as are most of the public, the United States would undoubtedly have been at war with most every nation in Europe before this. The moral is: Keep Cool—and this applies with

MAINE LEGISLATURE

The Governor's Bill is a thing of the past and the Legislature has settled down to the grind. Many unimportant bills and resolves are being passed and the different committees are reporting out bills but the real work of the session is yet to come.

The hearing on the Rumford Court House matter in the Senate Chamber last Friday got rather spicy before it was finished. What the report of the Committee will be is not known at present but it would be decidedly unfair to the rest of the County if there was not a referendum, provided it was reported "ought to pass."

Possibly the most interesting legislation last week was the defeat in the Senate of the bill to resubmit the primary law to the people. The vote was along party lines but one Republican voted with the Democrats and five Democrats voted with the Republicans. It will be remembered that the bill to resubmit was introduced by Senator D. R. Hastings of Auburn.

While admitting that the primary law was not perfect as it stood yet it had not been long enough in force so that its real benefits and faults can be known, was the main argument. Several Senators however declared against making a football of the constitution by submitting sections of it to the people on frequent or insufficient demands to do so.

The minority report of "ought not to pass" in regard to changing the general elections from September to November was adopted by a vote of 17 to 14 in the Senate.

FUND FOR ACADEMY FLOORS.

Last week attention was called to the need of new floors for the Academy and the friends of the school were earnestly solicited to contribute to a fund for this purpose. ## FARMERS' WEEK

The Big Agricultural Event of the Year

Farmers' Week will be held at Orono, March 8th to 13th, inclusive. It always begins Monday evening.

It is scarcely necessary to tell the people of Maine what Farmers' Week is for it has been an annual event for nine years and thousands of people have been in attendance but the present year's program deserves special mention in some particulars at least.

First: The list of speakers is notable in that it contains over eighty (80) different persons. It comprises representatives from the Experiment Station, the Maine Department of Agriculture, the Maine State Grange, experts in road building, farm powers, farm conveniences, and irrigation, from the College of Technology, teachers of agriculture in colleges of agriculture and secondary schools, teachers of home economics, a large number of successful farmers, experts in various lines from the Federal Department of Agriculture, and business firms, florists, landscape gardeners, the Maine Antituberculosis Association, and representatives of the Extension Department.

Second: The program itself presents the most attractive and comprehensive short course in agriculture, home economics and allied subjects that has ever been presented in this State.

Third: It is practical. An examination of the program will convince the most casual observer that it deals with the practical phases of farming and home making and will be handled by thoroughly competent persons. Every effort will be made to make every hour of the six days' course worth while to those in attendance. As one prominent farmer put the case last year, "Every day I have been here I have received pay for the cost of the entire trip."

Fourth: Special excursion rates will be given by the Maine Central and Bangor and Aroostook Railroads.

Fifth: Several state-wide associations will hold their annual meeting at Orono during Farmers' Week. Wednesday, the Maine Federation of Agricultural Associations holds its annual meeting. On the same date the Florists of Maine meet for the purpose of organizing a State Florists' Association. They will also have an exhibition and educational program, Friday and Saturday the Maine Association of Agricultural Students meet and on Friday the Agricultural School Course Alumni Association holds its annual meeting.

Printed programs for Farmers' Week and for the other Associations are available for distribution and will be sent on application to Leon S. Merrill, Orono, Maine.

OUR VISITORS FROM COLBY.
Wednesday morning, Miss Steward and Miss Webb, seniors at Colby College, came to speak to the Y. W. C. A. The regular meeting was held at four-fifteen, at which both the visitors spoke, after which tea was served at the residence of Miss Miriam Herrick. Both meetings and tea were well attended. In the evening a meeting open to all ladies was held in the assembly room at the Academy. We greatly regret that more were not present to hear the very interesting words of the Colby girls. The meeting was opened by the singing of hymns, after which Margaret and Blanche Herrick gave a duet, violin and piano. Miss Steward then read the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians. Miss Webb following.

Loss of Appetite.

A person that has lost appetite has lost something besides vitality, vigor, tone.

The way to recover appetite and all that goes with it is to take Hood's Stomach Pills—that strengthen the stomach, perfect digestion and makes eating a pleasure.

Thousands take it for spring loss of appetite and every body says there's nothing else so good as Hood's. Adv.

THE HOME CIRCLE.

Pleasant Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as they Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide.

Such things as honor and love are faith are only nobler than food and drink, but indeed I think we do them more, and suffer more sharply in their absence.

We must keep ourselves human. To remember that was said of Phillip Brooks that he was a saint but so human that one didn't mind it.

THE MIRACLE OF DIGESTION.

Have you considered how like a miracle is the process of digestion? We put a dead looking brown ball into the ground and when from it rises a state ly lily we say, "Behold a miracle." We give a man a bit of toast and back on for breakfast and when it appears later in a wonderful bit of statesman ship or a great war maneuver, we fail to behold the miracle. Through what wonderful processes, all unplanned by us, unaided by our hands, that bit of food has been changed into thinking, moving, heating power.

Ground up by the teeth, changed by the chemical action of the organic juices, it is sent on its way into the blood stream that is the veritable river of life. Other mills to grind, other chemists along the way, exert their influence on the bit of food, and slowly, but surely, it becomes the man himself, seeing, hearing, feeling, walking, thinking, doing. Whether we will it or not, the processes go on and our food is changed into muscle and bone, nerve and brain cell. In and out, up and down, it is tossed by merry red corpuscles, until at last it is fit to become a part of the personality and has its influence on our work.

Without our willing to, without our planning it, without the aid of our hands, this process goes on, but we can will whether or not the food is the kind that nourishes and sustains and strengthens, and does its work at last with a cry of pain or a song of cheer. We can plan the kind and the amount of food that is to make up brain and muscle and make our work produce the energies and achievement of a useful man.

It is a miracle of bringing the dead to life. What was yesterday merely food powerless to act or think or feel, is now working an essay or editing a newspaper, teaching a room full of boys and girls, or managing a shopful of men, or caring for the home and making it the center of happiness and usefulness. Whether these things shall be done well or ill, whether one has the power to be useful in any of those directions or merely an idler, depends far more than we are apt to believe on the kind and the amount of food that we pour into the mill that grinds out living and working force.

WHAT AN AMATEUR NURSE SHOULD KNOW.

At some time in her life almost every woman is called upon to nurse a sick relative, and for this reason it is well to know just what to do when the emergency arises. Not every woman is a born nurse. Amateurs are often unsatisfactory nurses through sheer over-anxiety, and, although they may perform all necessary duties conscientiously, their ministrations may be the reverse of soothing if they have not acquired the right sick-room manner—quiet, confident, cheery.

Nothing exasperates a patient more than a nurse who creeps about a room with excessive caution and speaks in a

CATARRH OF HEAL

Took Peruna Five Bottles Cured Me

Mr. Frank Richter, No. 305 East Second St., Winona, Minn., writes: "My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors, but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers, and five bottles cured me."

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know what it is to be afflicted with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and for catarrh of the stomach it is unsurpassed."

As a rule, people when ailing apply to a doctor to get a remedy. But a per cent of chronic last begin to use ready-to-take medicine number of people among our testifies that they had failed to cure them that it they find to their relief, to their is the remedy they should have taken

Ground up by the teeth, changed by the chemical action of the organic juices, it is sent on its way into the blood stream that is the veritable river of life. Other mills to grind, other chemists along the way, exert their influence on the bit of food, and slowly, but surely, it becomes the man himself, seeing, hearing, feeling, walking, thinking, doing. ## WHAT AN AMATEUR NURSE SHOULD KNOW.

At some time in her life almost every woman is called upon to nurse a sick relative, and for this reason it is well to know just what to do when the emergency arises. Not every woman is a born nurse. Amateurs are often unsatisfactory nurses through sheer over-anxiety, and although they may perform all necessary duties conscientiously, their ministrations may be the reverse of soothing if they have not acquired the right sick-room manner—quiet, confident, cheery.

Nothing exasperates a patient more than a nurse who creeps about a room with excessive caution and speaks in a whisper. Move quietly, of course, but deliberately; speak distinctly, but not in an undertone, and never converse in an undertone with any one else in the room or outside the door. That is nerve-racking to the patient. When he wants to talk be responsive, but don't keep the conversation up too long, and don't chatter continuously with the idea of "cheering up" your charge.

Keep the room properly ventilated and absolutely tidy, with medicine bottles, dressing, etc., out of sight, and remove food trays, medicine glasses, and so on the instant they are done with. See that the lighting is right and that the light never shines direct in the patient's eyes. Adjust the blind from time to time to prevent this if the bed faces the window—which is a good position if there is a pleasant view—and arrange lamp shades judiciously in the evening.

When a fire has to be kept up all night make it up last thing with small coal mixed with damp tea leaves, and have lumps of coal handy, each wrapped in newspaper, to replenish silently. The instructions which a doctor lays down about medicine, feeding or any sort of treatment must be carried out to the letter. The best way is to write his instructions conscientiously during each visit. If he orders medicine to be given every two hours, do not trust to memory, but reckon the time ahead and write it down—medicine at ten, twelve, two, four or whatever the case may be. Be perfectly accurate in measuring, using a medicine dropper for drugs and the average sized teaspoon for a teaspoonful.

A small clock is a necessity in a sick room, but frequently its ticking will irritate a nervous patient. The best way to overcome this is to cover it with a glass shade or a tumbler. In this way it can be seen but not heard. Occasionally a doctor orders an application of hot spirits. This is a process which must be very carefully carried out or the alcohol is likely to take fire. The best way to heat it is to set the whiskey into a cup, put in a chafing dish, pour hot water around it, then put on the lid. Afterward light the flame of the lamp and let the water boil gently for a few minutes.

Fold old muslin or gauze into the shape required, dip in boiling water and press dry with a potato ricer. Dip again in hot whiskey, squeeze as dry as possible, apply as hot as can be borne and cover with a piece of dry flannel. Keep the whiskey hot as long as it is needed and have two bits of muslin, so one can be changed while the other is kept on the patient.

A patient's hair should be combed twice a day at least. If it is a woman's, part it in the middle and the back, brush and comb one side at a time and make it into two neat braids.

5 Women Avoid Operations

For years we have been stating in the newspapers of the country that a great many women have escaped serious operations by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is true.

We are permitted to publish in this announcement extracts from the letters of five women. All have been recently received unsolicited. Could any evidence be more convincing?

1. HODGSON, ME.—"I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached and I was so nervous I could not sleep, and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation, but I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman."—Mrs. HARVARD SOWERS, Hodgson, Me.

2. SHELBYVILLE, KY.—"I suffered from a severe female trouble. My right side hurt me badly—it was finally decided that I must be operated upon. When my husband learned this he got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and after taking it a few days I got better and continued to improve until I am now well."—Mrs. MOLLIE SAUNDERS, R.F.D., Shelbyville, Ky.

3. HANOVER, PA.—"The doctor advised a severe operation, but my husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I experienced great relief in a short time. Now I feel like a new person and can do a hard day's work and not mind it."—Mrs. ADA WITZ, 303 Walnut St., Hanover, Pa.

4. DECATUR, ILL.—"I was sick in bed and three of the best physicians said I would have to be taken to the hospital for an operation as I had something growing in my left side. I refused to submit to the operation and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and it worked a miracle in my case, and I tell other women what it has done for me."—Mrs. LAURA A. GRISWOLD, 2437 East William Street, Decatur, Ill.

5. CLEVELAND, OHIO.—"I was very irregular and for several years my side pained me so that I expected to have to undergo an operation. Doctors said they knew of nothing that would help me. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I became regular and free from pain. I am thankful for such a good medicine and will always give it the highest praise."—Mrs. C. H. GRIFITH, 1668 Constant St., Cleveland, O.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Mr. Urban Bartlett is at home from business college for a week's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Jones are to move to Hartford, Mo., where they will have charge of the town farm.

Mrs. Ida Bartlett has gone to Berlin, N. H., for several weeks stay with relatives there.

Miss Elma Bartlett and Miss Marjorie Holman entertained nine tables of what at Grange Hall, Saturday evening. What was followed by a social dance. Refreshments were served.

"The Prince of Lairs," a comedy in three acts from the German, Von Mowr, is being prepared by Grange Hall, Saturday evening, March 6, the date having been changed from Feb. 25. List of characters as follows:

Arthur Hummel, John Howe, Harry Thomas, Fred Kimball, George Thomas, Russell Swan, Nelson, Willie Bartlett, Mrs. Hummel, Rose Bartlett, Mrs. Gold, Joseph Mitchell, Mrs. Gold, Elma Bartlett, Mrs. Gold, Marjorie Holman, Barbara, Verla Barlow.

This was to be followed by a social dance, good music to attendance. A table of food and coffee will be served for the guests.

A serious accident befell Mr. Virgil Adams, Monday. While helping load a box of logs, he slipped and fell back, then being held on a log with his feet on top of him, breaking both bones of his leg just above the ankle. He is now in the Bethel hospital, also Mr. Weeks of Rumford Falls, who together with the towns and he is as comfortable as could be expected.

Mrs. Harold Powers and children are spending the week at Virgil Adams' home.

THE NEW TREATMENT FOR SORE THROAT

Cuts out sore throat and chills so extensively used in the old-time "sore throat" remedy. They are too harsh for even severe sore throat, and often do harm if continuously taken. Dr. King's New Discovery is made by experts who understand these things and have combined the best of all remedies known to physicians—penicillin, menthol, thymol and other powerful, and effective—into a delicious tablet that not only cures but also soothes and does good. They quickly relieve sore throat, remove inflammation, soothe.

RUMFORD

Mr. Ernest L. Palmer, a brakeman on the Maine Central Railroad, while running on the track last Friday morning in front of a slowly moving locomotive near the round house in the Rumford yard, being blinded by the steam which came from the engine, did not see the ice over which he was treading, slipped and fell, striking his head on the sharp corner of a platform which led into the office of Mr. Charles T. Eldridge, cutting his head quite badly, with a large deep gash over one eye, which necessitated the taking of several stitches. Dr. Rowe was immediately called, and made Mr. Palmer as comfortable as could be expected.

The branch office of the American Express Co. have received orders to cut down expenses by means of having only one express team for the receiving and delivering of goods. Mr. Claude Quigley and Mr. Charles Dunton have been the drivers of the two teams, but Mr. Dunton left on Saturday night, leaving Mr. Quigley, the driver of the only team on the route.

A meeting of the George D. Bisbee Camp, No. 66, S. of V., will be held Thursday evening of this week at the Armory. An oyster supper will be served at 7.30 by George D. Bisbee. Visitors from Bryant's Pond and Buckfield will be present.

The regular meeting of the Cosmos Club was held at Hotel Rumford, Monday evening with supper at seven o'clock in the private dining room of the hotel. At about 8 P. M. the regular meeting of the evening commenced, the paper of the evening being presented by Mr. Dana C. York of the Rumford Lumber Co. on the subject, "Our Lumber Supply," involving questions of conservation and forestry. It was the best paper on a very important subject that has ever been presented to the club. There were sixteen present and after a very interesting, entertaining and instructive evening, the club adjourned at about 9.45 o'clock.

On Monday evening the Class of 1913, under pretense of having a class meeting, met at the home of Miss Jean Moir in Strathgairn Park. The evening was spent in playing cards, music, etc., and Mr. Ralph Woodman, as president of the class, in a fine speech which he made, presented Miss Moir with a very pretty casserole, as a wedding present from the class. Miss Moir's marriage to Mr. Fred Fish takes place on Wednesday of next week. Miss Moir was much surprised and pleased, but was fully equal to the occasion, "A fine lunch of shrimp wiggle, pickles, cake and coffee was served during the evening. All departed wishing, Miss Moir much happiness.

Adam Young, a freight brakeman of the Maine Central railroad, fell from the top of a box car in the Rumford yard while shifting cars last Sunday morning, striking on his hip and back. While it is thought that no bones were broken, he was badly shaken up, and will be incapacitated for work for several days to come.

The abnormally clear and warm weather of the past week or so is causing considerable uneasiness among the lumbermen whose contracts for the hauling of pulp wood are yet very much delayed, as the snow is fast leaving and roads softening up, making the work greatly behind. Extra teams and men are being put on by some of our local lumbermen in the hope of getting their cut of timber on the streams as quickly as possible.

Rev. and Mrs. Frederick C. Lee left town, Monday morning for Portland. They will be out of town for the entire week, going partly on a business trip and partly to see Mr. Lee's sister, Miss Elizabeth Lee, who is at the Maine General Hospital in Portland, where she has a very serious surgical operation performed, but has come through it safely, and is now reported as being out of danger. The Lenten services at St. Barnabas Church will be omitted until Mr. Lee's return.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Coan of Auburn, Maine, are visiting in Rumford.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Spinney and baby, Marion, who have been visiting Mrs. Spinney's grandparents in Portland, returned home, Monday.

RATE INCREASE NECESSARY

FARMERS' UNION OFFICIALS THINK RAILROADS ARE ENTITLED TO MORE REVENUE.

Products of Plow and Farmer Who Lives at Home Should Be Exempt From Increase.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The recent action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in granting an increase in freight rates in the eastern classification of territory; the application of the roads to state and interstate rates, and the utterances of President Wilson on the subject bring the farmers of this nation face to face with the problem of an increase in freight rates. It is the policy of the Farmers' Union to meet the issues affecting the welfare of the farmers squarely and we will do so in this instance.

The transportation facilities of the United States are inadequate to effectively meet the demands of commerce and particularly in the South and West additional railway mileage is needed to accommodate the movement of farm products. If in the wisdom of our Railroad Commissions an increase in freight rates is necessary to bring about an improvement in our transportation service, and an extension of our mileage, then an increase should be granted, and the farmer is willing to share such proportion of the increase as justly belongs to him, but we have some suggestions to make as to the manner in which this increase shall be levied.

Rates Follow Lines of Least Resistance.

The freight rates of the nation have been built up along lines of least resistance. The merchant, the manufacturer, the miner, the miller, the lumberman and the cattleman have had their traffic bureaus thoroughly organized and in many instances they have pursued the railroad, without mercy and with the power of organized tonnage they have hammered the life out of the rates and with unrestrained greed they have eaten the vitals out of our transportation system and since we have had railroad commissions, these interests, with skill and cunning, are represented at every hearing in which their business is involved.

The farmer is seldom represented at rate hearings, as his organizations have never had the finances to employ counsel to develop his side of the case and, as a result, the products of the plow bear an unequal burden of the freight expense. A glance at the freight tariffs abundantly proves this assertion. Cotton, the leading agricultural product of the South, already bears the highest freight rate of any necessary commodity in commerce, and the rate on agricultural products as a whole is out of proportion with that of the products of the factory and the mine.

We offer no schedule of rates, but hope the commission will be able to give the railroad such an increase in rates as is necessary without levying a further toll upon the products of the plow. The instance seems to present an opportunity to the Railroad Commissions to equalize the rates as between agricultural and other classes of freight without disturbing the rates on staple farm products.

What is a Fair Rate?

We do not know what constitutes a basis for rate making and have never heard of anyone who did claim to know much about it, but if the prosperity of the farm is a factor to be considered and the railroad commission concludes that an increase in rates is necessary, we would prefer that it come to us through articles of consumption on their journey from the factory to the farm. We would, for example, prefer that the rate on hogs remain as at present and the rate on meat bear the increase, for any farmer can then avoid the burden by raising his own meat, and a farmer who will not try to raise his own meat ought to be penalized. We think the rate on coal and brick can much better bear an increase than the rate on cotton and flour. We would prefer that the rate on plows remain the same, and machinery, planes and such articles as the poor farmer cannot hope to possess bear the burden of increase.

The increase in rates should be so arranged that the farmer who lives at home will bear no part of the burden, but let the farmer who boards in other states and countries and who feeds his stock in foreign lands, pay the price of his folly.

THE CHURCH AS A SOCIAL CENTER

A Broader Sphere for Religion—New Field for the Rural Church.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The social duty of the rural church is as much a part of its obligations as its spiritual side. In expressing its social interest, the modern rural church does not hesitate to claim that it is expressing a true religious instinct and the old-time idea that the social instincts should be starved while the spiritual nature was overfed with solid theological food, is fast giving way to a broader interpretation of the functions of true religion.

We take our place in the succession of those who have sought to make the world a fit habitation for the children of man when we seek to study and understand the social duty of the rural church. The true Christian religion is essentially social—its tenets of faith being love and brotherhood and fellowship. While following after righteousness, the church must challenge and seek to reform that social order in which moral life is expressed. While cherishing ideals of service, the rural church which attains the fullest measure of success is that which enriches as many lives as it can touch, and in no way can the church come in as close contact with its members as through the avenue of social functions.

The country town and the rural community need a social center. The church need offer no apology for its ambition to fill this need in the community. If an understanding of its mission brings its purposes into clear consciousness, the structure of a rural community is exceedingly complex; it contains many social groups, each of which has its own center, but there are many localities which have but one church and although such a church cannot command the interest of all the people, it is relieved from the embarrassment of religiously divided communities.

Social Needs Imperative.

The average country boy and girl have very little opportunity for real enjoyment, and have, as a rule, a vague conception of the meaning of pleasure and recreation. It is to fill this void in the lives of country youth that the rural church has risen to the necessity of providing entertainment, as well as instruction, to its membership among the young. The children and young people of the church should meet when religion is not even mentioned. It has been found safest for them to meet frequently under the direction and care of the church. To send them into the world with no social training exposes them to grave perils and to try to keep them out of the world with no social privileges is sheer folly. There is a social nature to both old and young, but the social requirements of the young are imperative. The church must provide directly or indirectly some modern equivalent for the husking bee, the quilting bee and the singing schools of the old days. In one way or another the social instincts of our young people must have opportunity for expression, which may take the form of clubs, parties, picnics or other forms of amusement. One thing is certain, and that is that the church cannot take away the dance, the card party and the theatre unless it can offer in its place a satisfying substitute in the form of more pleasing recreation.

Universal Instinct for Play.

In providing for enjoyment the church uses one of the greatest methods by which human society has developed. Association is never secure until it is pleasurable; in play the instinctive aversion of one person for another is overcome and the social mood is fostered. Play is the chief educational agency in rural communities and in the play-day of human habits are evolved. As individuals come together in social gatherings, their viewpoints are broadened, their ideals are lifted and finally they constitute a cultured and refined society.

It is plain, therefore, that the church which aims at a perfected society must use in a refined and exalted way the essential factors in social evolution and must avail itself of the universal instinct for play. If the church surrounds itself with social functions which appeal to the young among its membership, it will fill a large part of the lamentable gap in rural pleasures and will reap the richest reward by promoting a higher and better type of manhood and womanhood.

PEG O' MY HEART

By J. Hartley Manners

A Comedy of Youth Founded by Mr. Manners on His Great Play of the Same Title—Illustrations From Photographs of the Play

Copyright, 1913, by Dodd, Mead & Company

SYNOPSIS.

Frank O'Connell, young Irish patriot, is shot and wounded by British soldiers while making a home rule speech. He is aided by Angela Kingsnorth, an English society girl, who defends him.

Angela takes O'Connell to her brother's home and helps to nurse him. He recovers, and he and the girl become fast friends.

O'Connell when well is sent to jail for disturbing the peace. He finally writes Angela that he has finished his sentence.

"If you leave me it will be unfair to us both."

"Oh, my dear one! My dear one!" He folded her in his arms.

"I'll give the best of my days to guard you and protect you and bring you happiness."

"I am happy now," and her voice died to a whisper.

Three days afterward Nathaniel Kingsnorth returned late at night from a political banquet.

It had been a great evening. At last it seemed that life was about to give him what he most wished for. His dearest ambitions were, apparently, about to be realized.

He had been called on as a staunch Conservative to add his quota to the already wonderful array of brilliant pronouncements of seasoned statesmen and admirable speakers. Kingsnorth had excelled himself. Never had he spoken so powerfully. Being one of the only men at the banquet who had enjoyed even a brief glimpse of Ireland, he made the solution of the Irish question the main topic of his speech. Speaking lucidly and earnestly, he placed before them his plan for Irish life. His hearers were enthralled.

When he sat down the cheering was prolonged.

When he left the gathering he was in the condition of ecstasy. Lying back amid the cushions during his long drive home, he closed his eyes and pictured the future. His imagination ran riot. It took wings and flew from height to height. He saw himself the leader of a party—"the Kingsnorth party"—controlling his followers with a hand of iron and driving them to vote according to his judgment and his desire.

By the time he had reached home he had entered the cabinet and was being spoken of as the probable prime minister.

He poured out a liquor and stood sipping it as he turned over the letters brought by the night's post. One arrested him. It had been delivered by hand and was marked "Most Urgent."

As he read the letter every vestige of color left his face.

CHAPTER VI.

A HOUSE OF CARDS.

KINGSNORTH sank into a chair. The letter slipped from his fingers. All his dreams had vanished in a moment. His house of cards had toppled down. His ambitions were surely and positively destroyed at one stroke. He mechanically picked up the letter and reread it. Had it been his death sentence it could not have affected him more cruelly.

Dear Nathaniel! I scarcely know how to write to you about what has happened. I am afraid I am in some small measure to blame. Ten days ago your sister showed me a letter from a man named O'Connell.

Kingsnorth crumpled the letter in his hand as he read the hated name—the name of the man who had caused him so much discomfort during that unfortunate visit to his estate in Ireland. How he blamed himself now for having ever gone there! There was indeed a case on it for the Kingsnorths.

He straightened out the crumpled piece of paper and read on—

"A man named O'Connell—the man who lived in your house in Ireland after he had been shot by the soldiers. He was coming to England and wished to see her. She asked my permission. I refused. She said, 'but she was decided. If I should not permit her to see him in my house she would meet him elsewhere. It seemed better the meeting should be under my roof, so I consented. I bitterly regret myself now for not accumulating notes with the particulars. You might have succeeded in stopping what has happened.'"

Your sister and O'Connell were married this morning by special license and left this afternoon for Liverpool on route to America.

I cannot begin to tell you how much I deplore the unfortunate affair. It will always be a lasting sorrow to me. I cannot write any more now. My head is aching with the thought of what it will mean to you. Try not to think too harshly of me and believe me, always your affectionate cousin,

MARY CAROLINE WREXFORD.

Kingsnorth's head sank on to his breast. Every bit of life left him, everything about his feet aches, the laughing water of his friends.

Were Angela there at that moment he could have killed her.

The humiliation of it! The degradation of it! Married to that lawless Irish agitator! The man now a member of his family! A cry of misery broke from him as he realized that the best years of his life were to come and go fruitlessly. His career was ended. Despite his heavy on his soul.

Standing on the main deck of an Atlantic liner stood Angela and O'Connell.

They were facing the future together. Their faces were turned to the west. The sun was sinking in a blaze of color.

Their eyes lighted up with the joy of hope.

Love was in their hearts.

A year after the events in the preceding chapter took place O'Connell and his young wife were living in a small apartment in one of the poorer sections of New York city.

The first few months in America had been glorious ones for them. Their characters and natures unfolded to each other as some wonderful paintings, each taking its own hues from the adoration of the other.

In company with a noted Irish organizer O'Connell had spoken in many of the big cities of the United States and was everywhere hailed as a hero and a martyr to English tyranny.

But he had one ever present handicap—a drawback he had never felt during the years of struggle preceding his marriage. His means were indeed small. He tried to eke out a little income writing articles for the newspaper.

When he left the gathering he was in the condition of ecstasy. Lying back amid the cushions during his long drive home, he closed his eyes and pictured the future. His imagination ran riot. It took wings and flew from height to height. He saw himself the leader of a party—"the Kingsnorth party"—controlling his followers with a hand of iron and driving them to vote according to his judgment and his desire.

CHAPTER VII.

A COMMUNICATION FROM NATHANIEL KINGSNORTH.

THE months that followed were the hardest in O'Connell's life. Strive as he would, he could find no really remunerative employment. He had no special training. He knew no trade. His pen, though slow of eloquence he had when speaking. He worked in shops and in factories. He tried to report on newspapers. But his lack of experience everywhere handicapped him. What he contrived to earn during those months of struggle was all too little as the time approached for the great event. Angela was now entirely confined to her bed. She seemed to grow more here was he going back to Ireland as poor as he left it, though richer immeasurably in the love of Angela.

She was sitting perfectly still, her eyes on the floor, when he entered the room. He came in so softly that she did not hear him. He lifted her head and looked into her eyes. He noticed with certainty what had been so far only a vague, ill-defined dread. Her face was very, very pale and transparent. Her eyes were sunken and had a strange brilliancy. She was much sadder and far more ethereal than on that day when they stood on the deck of the ship and turned their faces so hopefully to the new world.

He felt a knife-like stab start through his blood to his heart. His breath caught.

Angela looked up at him radiantly. He kissed her and with mock cheerfulness he said laughingly:

"Such news, my darling! Such wonderful news!"

"Good news, dear?"

"The best in the world," and he choked a sob.

"I knew it would come! I knew it would. Tell me, dear."

"We're to go back—to Ireland. See, here are the orders," and he showed her the official letter.

She took it wonderingly and read it. Her hand dropped to her side. Her head dropped into the same position he had found her in. In a moment he was kneeling at her side.

"What is it, dear?"

"We can't go, Frank."

"We can't go? What are you saying, dear?"

"We can't go," she repeated, her body crumpled up limply in the chair.

"And why not, Angela? I know I can't take you back as I brought you here, dear, if that's what you mean. The luck's been against me. It's been cruel hard against me. An' that thought is tearing at me heart this minute."

"It isn't that, Frank," she said faintly.

"Then what is it?"

"Oh," she cried, "I hoped it would be so different—so very different."

"What did you think would be so different, dear? Our going back? Is that what's troubling you?"

"No, Frank, not that. I don't care how we go back so long as you are with me." He pressed her hand. In a moment she went on: "But we can't go, we can't go. Oh, my dear, my dear, can't you see? Can't you think?"

She looked imploringly into his eyes.

A new wonder came into his. Could it be true? Could it? He took both her hands and held them tightly and stood up, towering over her and trembling violently.

"Is it—? Is it—?" he cried and stopped as if afraid to complete the question.

She smiled a wan smile up at him and nodded her head as she answered: "The union of our lives is to be complete. Our love is to be rewarded."

"A child is coming to us?" he whispered.

"It is," and her voice was hushed too.

"Praise be to God! Praise be to his holy name!" And O'Connell clasped his hands in prayer.

In a little while she went on: "It was the telling you I wanted to be so different. I wanted you when you heard it to be free of care—happy. And I've waited from day to day, hoping for the best—that some good fortune would come to you."

He forced one of his old-time, hearty laughs, but there was a hollow ring in it.

"What is that you sayin' at all? Wait for good fortune? Is there any good fortune like what you've just told me? Sure I'm ten times the happiest man since I came into this room." He put his arm around her and, sitting beside her, drew her closely to him.

"Listen, dear," he said, "listen. We'll go back to the old country. Our child shall be born where we first met. There'll be no danger. No one shall harm us with that little life trembling in the balance—the little precious life. If it's a girl child she'll be the mother of her people, and if it's a man child he shall grow up to carry on his father's work. So there—there, my darling, we'll go back—go back."

She shook her head feebly. "I can't," she said.

"I didn't want to tell you, but now you make me. Frank, dear, I am ill!" His heart almost stopped. "Oh, my darling, what is it? Is it serious? Tell me it isn't serious!" And his voice rang with a note of agony.

"Oh, no, I don't think so. I saw the doctor today. He said I must be careful, very careful, until our baby is born."

"An' ye kept it all to yourself, my brave one, my dear one. All right. We won't go back. We'll stay here. I'll make them find me work. I'm strong. I'm clever, too, and crafty. Angela, I'll bring it from this bustling city. I'll fight it and beat it. My darling shall have everything she wants. My little mother—my precious little mother!"

Angela, lying so still, through the long days, could only hope. She felt so helpless. It was woman's weakness that brought him like O'Connell to the edge of despair. And hers was not merely woman's weakness, but the more poignant one of pride. Was it fair to her husband. Was it just? In England she had prospered relatives. They would not let her die in her misery. They could not let her baby come into the world with poverty as its only inheritance. Till now she had been unable to master her feeling of hatred and bitterness for her brother Nathaniel, her intense dislike and contempt for her sister Monica. From the time she left England she had not written to either of them. Could she now? Something decided her.

One night O'Connell came back disheartened. Try as he would, he could not conceal it. He was getting to the end of his courage. There was insufficient work at the shop he had been working in for several weeks. He had been told he need not come again.

Angela, lying motionless and white, tried to comfort him and give him heart.

She made up her mind that night. The next day she wrote to her brother. She could not bring herself to express any regret for what she had done or said. On the contrary, she made many references to her happiness with the man she loved. She did write of the hardships they were passing through. But they were only temporary. O'Connell was so clever, so brilliant, he must win in the end. Only just now she was ill. She needed help. She asked no gift—a loan merely. They would pay it back when the days of plenty came. She would not ask even this were it not that she was not only ill, but the one great, wonderful thing in the world was to be vouchsafed her—motherhood. In the name of her unborn baby she begged him to send an immediate response.

She asked a neighbor to post the letter so that O'Connell would not know of her sacrifice. She waited anxiously for a reply.

Some considerable time afterward—on the eve of her travel and when things with O'Connell were at their worst—the answer came by cable.

She was alone when it came.

Her heart beat furiously as she opened it. Even if he only sent a little it would be so welcome now when they were almost at the end. If he had been generous how wonderful it would be for her to help the man to whom nothing was too much to give her. The fact that her brother had cabled strengthened the belief that he had hastened to come to her rescue.

She opened the cable and read it. Then she fell back on the pillow with a low, faint moan.

When, hours later, O'Connell returned from a vain search for work he found her senseless with the cable in her fingers. He tried to revive her without success. He sent a neighbor for a doctor. As he watched the worn, patient face, his heart felt to bursting, the thought flashed through him what could have happened to cause this collapse. He became conscious of the cable he had found tightly clasped in her hand. He picked it up and read it. It was very brief. All it said was:

You have made my bed. Lie in it. NATHANIEL KINGSNORTH.

Toward morning the doctor placed a little muffle of humanity in O'Connell's arms. He looked down at it in a stupor. It had really come to pass—their child—Angela's and his! A little baby girl! The tiny wall from this child, born of love and in sorrow, seemed to wake his dull senses. He pressed the muffle to him as the hot tears flowed down his cheeks. A woman in one of the adjoining flats who had kindly offered to help took the child away from him. The doctor led him to the bedside. He looked down at his loved one. A glaze was over Angela's eyes as she looked up at him. She tried to smile. All her suffering was forgotten. She knew only pride and love. She was at peace. She raised her hand, thin and transparent now, to O'Connell. He pressed it to his lips.

She whispered:

"My baby. Bring me—my baby."

He took it from the woman and placed it in Angela's weak arms. She kissed it again and again. The child would pitifully. The effort had been too much for Angela's falling strength. Consciousness left her.

Just before sunrise she woke. O'Connell was sitting beside her. He had never moved. The infant was sleeping on some blankets on the couch, the woman watching her.

Angela motioned her husband to bend near to her. Her eyes about with unearthly brightness. She put his ear near her lips. Her voice was very, very faint.

"Take—care—of—our—baby, Frank. I'm—leaving you. God—help you—and—keep—you—and—bless—you—for—your—love—of—me." She paused to take breath. Then she whispered her last words. The words never left O'Connell's memory for all the days of all the years that followed.

Say you saw it in the Citizen.

TONE UP THE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic-Medicine, is Necessary.

Everybody is troubled at this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished.

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. Ask your druggist for this medicine and get it today. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test for forty years—that makes pure, rich blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. It is the all-year-round blood-purifier and health-giver. Nothing else acts like it, for nothing else is like it; so be sure to get Hood's.

GOULD'S ACADEMY NOTES.

with a brief prayer. The general subject of the meeting was social service. Miss Webb spoke first, telling us of what the Colby girls are doing in this line. Among other things they conduct singing classes for mill girls and send two members to Augusta to teach swimming to girls in the Y. W. C. A. gymnasium. Miss Stewart told us of the work of immigrant girls, and was especially interesting because her account was so largely personal. There was an opportunity for informal questions and many stayed after the meeting to talk with Miss Stewart and Miss Webb. Thursday morning a large delegation escorted our guests to the train and cheered their departure. The Gould's girls enjoyed the visit very much and feel that they gained inspiration for social service.

"The Model Lover," the play which the senior class gives for the Academy Fair, is a story of two girls who, feeling the "fire of genius burning," set up a studio and go in for high art.

Colonel Francis, uncle of one of the girls and guardian of the other, plots with his old friend and arranges a marriage between the niece and Prof. Pottier's son. American and French methods do not work together and serious complications ensue.

The Colonel's housekeeper and the actor who poses for the girls, complicate the cast of characters.

The following is the program:
Piano Duet, Jennie and Herbert Dean,
Greek Drill,
Sixteen Girls,
Song,
Male Quartet.

Drama—A Model Lover.

Art. 25. To see what sum of money the town will vote and raise to pay on the town debt and interest.

Art. 26. To see what sum of money the town will vote and raise for the sewer system.

Art. 27. To see if the town will vote to raise money, and what sum, for the maintenance of State highways during the ensuing year within the limits of the town, under the provisions of section 9 of Chapter 130 of the Public Laws of 1913.

Art. 28. To see what sum of money the town will vote to Brown Post for the proper observance of Memorial Day.

Art. 29. To see if the town will vote to pay for the Collector's bond for the year 1915.

Art. 30. To see what sum of money the town will vote and raise for a sidewalk on High street.

Art. 31. To see what sum of money the town will vote and raise toward finishing the sidewalk on Broad street.

Art. 32. To see what sum of money the town will vote and raise for the extermination of the brown-tail moth.

Art. 33. To see if the town will vote and raise the sum of $300 to procure from the Bethel Library Association the free use of its books during the ensuing year, for all the inhabitants of the town under such restrictions and regulations as shall insure the safety and good usage of the books.

Art. 34. To see if the town will vote to authorize the town treasurer to hire money, if necessary, to pay outstanding bills.

Art. 35. To see what action the town will take toward arranging for a Good Roads Day to be held this coming summer.

Art. 36. To elect one or more fire wards and establish the pay they shall receive for their services.

Art. 37. To see if the town will vote to accept the list of jurors as made out by the selectmen, town clerk and treasurer.

And any other business that may legally come before the meeting.

Hereof fall not and have you there this warrant with your doing thereon.

Given under our hands this tenth day of February, A. D. 1916.

F. F. DEAN,
M. L. THURSTON,
C. E. BARKER,

Selectmen of Bethel.

The selectmen will be in their office Saturday, the 27th day of February, 1916, for the purpose of revising the list of voters.

LEGISLATIVE NOTICE.

The Committee on Inland Fisheries and Game will give a public hearing in its room at the State House, in Augusta, on Thursday, March 4, at 2 P. M., on No. 123, Petition by citizens of Paris, Greenwood and Woodstock, in the county of Oxford, that a law be enacted making it unlawful for any one person to take, catch, kill or have in possession more than five trout and land-locked salmon, both included, in any one day, from Oversett Pond, so-called, situated in the town of Greenwood, in the county of Oxford.

JOHN H. GERRISH, Secretary.

LEGISLATIVE NOTICE.

The Committee on Inland Fisheries and Game will give a public hearing in its room at the State House, in Augusta, on Thursday, March 4, at 2 P. M., on No. 111, Petition of John L. Hodgeson and 17 others, residents of Oxford county, asking that the law protecting black bass in Lake Christopher, or Bryant's Pond, in Oxford county, be repealed.

JOHN H. GERRISH, Secretary.

TELLING US HOW.

There is nothing more irritating to the people of a small town than the air of superiority that people from larger towns have towards them and their village. It is hard to say just what prompts the city man to feel greater than the villager, but he almost invariably does, and what makes it worse, shows it in his actions.

It is the weakness of the city people, this belief of theirs that country people are back numbers. The man from a city concerns pays the country business man a visit and shows plainly that he considers the little merchant a very small potato; but if he were wise enough to realize the truth of their respective businesses, he would know that the back-number merchant, as he looks upon him, is laying by each year more than the city chap is drawing as a hired man from a company that could find a thousand like him in a day's time.

The narrow-brained lecturer drops into the small town, and at the beginning of his talk, mentions that he has changed his subject, "for fear the one announced would be over the heads of the audience," and then proceeds to ramble along for a couple of hours with stale stories and disconnected ideas, boring his auditors half to death. The Chautauque entertainer, until he has had a good deal of experience; the traveling salesman, up to the time he becomes of some value to his house; the transient visitor, on a chance business or pleasure trip; the young city employee, before he learns the lessons of the relation of capital to business, wherever it is employed—all of them make the same mistake of misjudging the capacity, the intelligence and the character of country people.

If there is such a thing as superiority between city and country folks, the latter have the best opportunity of securing it. But as people, there is no difference between those who live in cities and those who live in the country. They all read the same newspapers, the same magazine and the same books; they hear the same lecturers, and see the same theatrical performances; they attend the same high schools and graduate from the same colleges and universities; they take the same trips, visit the same vacation resorts, and make as many excursions abroad; they ride in Pullmans as often, and pay their bills as regularly, and when everything is counted, it is hard to point out any difference between them, except that the country people have the advantage of freedom from the life in throng, and from the scramble for a livelihood with great numbers contending for a share.

We have no contempt or criticism for those who prefer to live in a city, but we do object to their attitude of scorn for the doings of those who live in the country or in small towns. There is no basis for their feeling of superiority and, to a person with a proper understanding of the relations of things, it is unbecomingly and unbecomingly.

LOWELL ANIMAL FERTILIZERS

A WHOLE LOT DEPENDS

upon your judgment in the choice of your fertilizer. If you select Lowell Animal Fertilizers you make no mistake. They have been tested for years—are always the same—always satisfactory. They restore the elements that are lacking in the soil, nourish the growing crop and increase the yield. Lowell Animal Fertilizers are the most powerful crop producers known, and the right selection of fertilizers may mean the difference between success and failure.

"I have used your potato grower with great success, having raised at the rate of nearly four hundred and fifty bushels potatoes to the acre. In my experience Lowell Fertilizers are always reliable."
